

“I strive to provide care that goes beyond treating illness and prescribing medication. I want to make sure my patients know I am there and will care for them as individuals.”

About Valeria Jimenez, MD

Dr. Valeria Jimenez has always had an interest in learning how the body works, and she knew medicine was the perfect opportunity to use that knowledge to help people live healthier lives. Her favorite part of being a physician is building relationships with patients. She enjoys learning about them beyond their health concerns. “I strive to provide care that goes beyond treating illness and prescribing medication. I want to make sure my patients know I am there and will care for them as individuals,” she says. She is passionate about caring for the senior population and considers them the “backbone of our society.”

When not caring for patients, Dr. Jimenez enjoys going on walks, visiting the beach, and reading.
