“I take care of my patients like I take care of my parents. I have a strong relationship with my father and mother; therefore, I apply those same principles in serving the senior population.”

About Kishalay Sinha, MD, MPH

At a young age, Dr. Kishalay Sinha knew he wanted to become a physician to “improve the overall health of our communities.” Getting to know patients is his favorite part of his profession. “I take care of my patients like I take care of my parents. I have a strong relationship with my father and mother; therefore, I apply those same principles in serving the senior population.” Dr. Sinha says. He wants patients to feel supported. “I motivate and inspire my patients to take control of their health,” he adds. He likes seeing his patients often and strives to be accessible. He always speaks with patients “in a positive and uplifting manner.”

In his free time, Dr. Sinha can be found weightlifting, cooking, or working on his golf swing.
