“I want my patients to feel comfortable, heard, and confident that they have a healthcare partner dedicated to their well-being.”

About Carine Remy, DNP, APRN-C

Carine Remy brings a rare and remarkable perspective to her practice — that of both a physician and a nurse practitioner. Born and raised in Haiti, her passion for medicine took root early, inspired by family and friends who dedicated their lives to caring for others. She practiced as a pediatrician in Haiti for more than thirteen years before relocating to Florida twenty-one years ago in search of greater stability and new opportunities. "The move meant redefining my professional path — but not my commitment to compassionate, high-quality patient care," she says.

Carine builds relationships by listening attentively, treating every patient with dignity and respect, and creating a welcoming, nonjudgmental environment where patients feel comfortable sharing their concerns. She takes time to explain diagnoses clearly, encourages questions, and involves patients in shared decision-making. "I want my patients to feel comfortable, heard, and confident that they have a healthcare partner dedicated to their well-being," she says.

When not with patients, Carine enjoys spending quality time with family and friends, traveling, exploring new cultures, and listening to music to recharge and maintain balance.
